Improvement Science Alert

Every month the Knowledge and Intelligence team at NHS IQ scour over 250 sources of intelligence to sign-post to new and emerging evidence on the topics of improvement science, leadership and large scale transformational change.

Inspired by the alerts of NHS Institute and NHS Diabetes and Kidney Care, the Improvement Science Alert (ISA) aims to bring to light key reports, research papers, articles, tools and opinion pieces in a succinct bibliographic style.

The ISA contains a number of different types of intelligence, including opinion pieces, journal articles, magazine articles and reports. To ensure you are able to access the right information at the right time, please refer to the key below, which highlights the level of access you need to view the full text of the resource.

- signifies a resource is entirely open access for any online user
- signifies access to OpenAthens resources from NICE (note the majority of health and social care staff can register free for an account - see if you are eligible here)
- signifies a restriction requiring payment in order to access a resource, e.g. books

Has this document been passed to you by a colleague? You can access the ISA yourself:

- Through subscription to the monthly NHS IQ External Newsletter
- Via NHS IQ’s website where the current and archived editions are stored here

To keep up to date with this area of work from NHS IQ, you can track activity on Twitter using #IQISA.
